9 Q 75-6

OOA
19 July 90

First impressions were of an area that was a water/structure/land interface that had to do with shipping. There were many sweating, hot people, some in hardhats, working here, along with much wreckage, sunken structures, and a great jumble and complexity of objects.

Impressions were of a port area, and moving and unloading things. An analytic/signal impression of ^{supplies} containers was present.

A search was then conducted on 5 ships;

Impressions were that four ships were either clean or could not be detected against. A fifth vessel, later identified by the monitor as the [REDACTED] seemed to have Material was in the form of [REDACTED] hard bridge-shaped blocks, may have been wrapped in plastic, but was rolled up in loose fabric and stuffed neatly into a space between two vertical metal surfaces or walls.
